

Gillian Clegg

Gillian Clegg is Vice President, Energy Policy and Procurement, for Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

In this role, Clegg is responsible for the planning, procurement, portfolio management, contract management and settlements of all gas and electric supply. In addition, she is responsible for developing and advocating for policy positions relating to energy procurement and wholesale market design in various venues.

Clegg has more than two decades of experience in the energy policy and procurement field. Since joining PG&E in 2007, she has held key roles of increasing responsibility within the company's Energy Policy and Procurement team. Clegg's extensive experience includes effectively negotiating and procuring agreements for renewable energy, energy storage, resource adequacy and other wholesale market products, and overseeing planning, analysis and financial hedging for PG&E's electric portfolio. Additionally, she has developed numerous policy positions to support customers in legislative and regulatory matters.

Prior to PG&E, Clegg served as a Quantitative Analyst for Powerex, a power and natural gas trading company in Vancouver, Canada.

Clegg earned a Bachelor of Science in Mathematics from Simon Fraser University and a Master of Science in Mathematical Finance from the University of British Columbia. Clegg earned the distinction of charter holder with the Chartered Financial Analyst Institute.
